 ENGLISH AND CHINESE DICTIONARY.

PUNY AND MANDARIN PRONUNCIATION.
AN ABBREVIATED CHINESE-ENGLISH DICTIONARY BY THE REV.
W. LORCHSCHILD, published at the Daily Press Office, Hongkong.

FOR scope and practical service, this work stands unrivalled. All the new words which the Chinese have of late years been compelled to coin for the purpose of introducing machinery, photography, ideography, and in science generally, which the rapid advancement of foreign relations has imposed upon them, are carefully collected and clearly and fully illustrated and explained, forming criteria for students of such instructive nature, that the Chinese and English words given, the accents being carefully marked on the best principle hitherto attained. This 'topographical' method of pronouncing words, to make the Chinese and English type correspond in the size of body, thereby effecting a vast improvement in the appearance of the dictionary, and rendering it more convenient than hitherto attained, and disposing with those vast margins and vacant spaces which have

THE scope of the work is vast, and its utilitarian purposes so complete, that a reference to the pages enables a person who understands English to become immediately acquainted with natives who understand nothing but Chinese. In this respect the work will be found indispensable to all Europeans residing in China, and the natives themselves it explains subjects fully, with which a very few indeed of them are perfectly acquainted. To those who are ignorant of the Chinese language, it cannot but be invaluable occasionally.

It comprises upwards of two thousand large quarto pages:

[illegible]

AS REGARDING PATTERNS, they must not be of intrinsic value. This is excluded all articles of a valuable nature, such as jewelry, watches, etc., and is limited to the pattern of a garment, apart from its mere use as a pattern; and quantity of any material not ostensibly as such, and not intended to be so considered as having on this ground no value.

It is not made so writing or marking the address of the person for whom the packet is intended, and that of the sender, a trade mark, numbers, and prices of the articles; otherwise the Trade Mark is retained, or forwarded as an unpaid letter.

The Patterns must be sent in correct paper, and in no case so folded as to be a cover, or needs, or covers, and so forth, which must be sent in open boxes, may be enclosed in a paper, and the cover must be marked with the initials of the sender, and the initials of the receiver, so closed that they cannot readily be opened, even although they be transparent, and they must be used for no purpose, but for completion of the pattern. The price will be paid for the pattern as forwarded as an unpaid letter.

The Patterns, or the contents thereof, must not contain any article which is sealed or otherwise against inspection.
